内容概要

This is the third and final volume of the classic Chinese fantasy novel, Journey to the West. In it the four pilgrims—the Tang Priest Sanzang and his three powerful disciples, Monkey, Pig and Friar Sand—have to deal with many more monsters and misfortunes before they finally reach their goal: Thunder Monastery in the western Heaven where the Lord Buddha lives. Even here their troubles are not at an end. The scriptures they are given at first are all blank. On this last part of the journey the demons come in as wide a range of shapes and kinds as ever. Among them are spider-women who spin webs from their navels, a pride of lion monsters and a terrible female spirit who carries the Tang Priest down into her bottom-less cave to marry him. These and all the other fiends test to the very limit Monkey's ingenuity, supernatural powers and connections throughout the universe. As in earlier volumes, he is hindered as much as helped by the oafish but loveable Pig. The story is told with the zest, imagination and humour that have made it one of China's best-loved novels for four hundred years. It is not just a tale of the fantastic; it is also rich in insights into human nature and human society. The illustrations are taken from a nineteenth-century Chinese edition of the book. A "Translator's Afterword" discusses this great feat of the imagination and outlines how the cycle of legends grew over many hundred years. Jacket drawing by: Wei Wei.

章节摘录

During the tumult the Great Sage came on the scene, and shouting "Make way" he raised his iron cudgel, shook it till it was as thick as a bowl and twelve feet long, and struck and parried as he came charging out. The Nine Bright Shiners, who were no match for him, fell back. "You reckless Protector of the Horses," they shouted when they were back in the safety of their own positions. "You have committed the most terrible crimes. You stole the peaches and the wine, wrecked the Peach Banquet, and pilfered the immortality pills of Lord Lao Zi. On top of all this you brought some of the immortal liquor you stole back here. Don't you realize that you have piled crime upon crime ?

" The Great Sage laughed. "It's true, it's true," he said, "but what are you going to do about it ?

In obedience to a golden edict of the Jade Emperor," the Nine Bright Shiners replied, "we have led our troops here to subdue you. Submit at once, or else all these creatures of yours will have to pay with their lives. If you refuse, we shall trample this mountain flat and turn your cave upside-down."

"You hairy gods," roared the Great Sage in a fury, "what magic powers have you got to let you talk so big ?

Clear off, or I'll give you a taste of my cudgel." The Nine Bright Shiners did a waltz together, which did not frighten the Handsome Monkey King in the least. He whirled his gold-banded cudgel, parrying to right and left, and fought the Nine Bright Shiners till their muscles were weak and their strength was gone; then each of them broke ranks and fled, dragging their weapons behind them. They rushed to the command post of the central corps and reported to the Pagoda-Bearing Heavenly King Li that the Monkey King was so ferocious that they had fled from the battlefield, unable to defeat him. Heavenly King Li then sent the Four Heavenly Kings and the Twenty-eight Constellations into battle. The Great Sage, not at all frightened at this, ordered the One-horned Demon King, the seventy-two kings of the monsters, and the four Stalwart Generals to draw up their line of battle outside the gates of the cave.
