章节摘录

The idea of patient rights came about when patients demanded more information about their health problems and treatment. They also demanded better care at lower costs and wanted to be more involved in the decisions about their care and treatment. Patients were no longer willing to be viewed as helpless and unknowing people who accepted the doctor's advice without question. In 1973 the American Hospital Association (AHA) developed and issued A Patient's Bill of Rights. The bill of rights states that the patient has the right to expect "considerate and respectful care". The patient should be treated as a person and be given kind and thoughtful care. They should not be denied access to care due to race, creed, colour, national origin, sex, age, disability or source of payment. The values, beliefs, cultural practices and personality of the patient should be considered when planning and providing care.
