章节摘录

版权页：插图：Styled by Beethoven himself, Les adieux, l'absence, et la retour. (The parting, the absence, and the return) .As such it is the finest pieceof programme music ever written. It is dedicated to his friend andpatron, the Archduke Rudolph, but it is not known definitely that it wasconnected with the absence of the Archduke himself. The generalfeeling seems to suggest a more tender attachment. The music isBeethoven at his very best, and is truly representative of his matureperiod. The interrelation of the whole of the music, its close affinitywith the opening musical motto of three notes, under which Beethovenwrote Lebe-wohl (Fare thee well) is astounding. Whether written inclear notes or obscured subtly, this leading motive lies at the bottom ofevery phrase. It is the generating idea, the essence of the.
