章节摘录

What Makes a Good Poem ?

A good poem awakens the senses, allowing me to see, touch experience something in a powerful way. A good poem makes the ordinary and familiar extraordinary. A poem for children——what makes it good ? First, rhythm is the skeleton that holds a poem together. A strong but still interesting rhythm pleases the ear and tongue. Secondly, rhyme can be funny. It is just a neat way of completing a thought in a poem for the young. It is also great for reading aloud, and some attention needs to be paid to the sounds of the words themselves. Last is the thought and the idea. A good poem captures a certain moment, or memory, like a word photograph. In one quick reading, a poem can give us a reminder of how it feels to breathe water like fish in a stream, of how a mother uses her hand to protect a baby's eye. A good poem is a photograph capturing the most forgettable and most unforgettable moments in our lives. A poet is a little like a photographer who shoots a subject from an unexpected angle. Even when its subject has been written many times, poetry invites you to consider it from a new angle. The language a good poem uses is similarly fresh, surprising and memorable.
