前言

Thirty years of economic reforms and opening up has transformed China into a land of opportunity. Dismantling the stale system of the past, the government has created a stable economic environment in which entrepreneurs with drive and talent can realize their dreams. Stories of their success are a reflection of the economic progress this country has made in that epic march down the road of reforms. We are therefore proud to have featured a series, "Up Close", with profiles of some of the top business people in Business Weekly, which is published by and distributed with China Daily every Monday. This book is a compilation of Business Weekly's "Up Close" pieces commemorating the 30th anniversary of economic reforms. The reforms have released the energy and daring of thousands of entrepreneurs across the country. Many of them have taken considerable financial, and, sometimes, personal risks to achieve their goals. For many of them, the initial desire to enrich themselves and their immediate families has, over time, transcended into a mission to establish in China world-class enterprises that can enrich the country and lift the living standards of its people. These are the people who have made the "Made in China" label a symbol of quality goods at competitive prices in global markets. Some of the international brands created by Chinese entrepreneurs today are highly valued by consumers and investors around the world.

作者简介

Zhu Ling , has been editor-in-chief of China Daily, the only national English-language news-paper in China, since October 2004. The articles featured in this book were written by some of the most experienced business journalists in the country. These reporters have been tracking China's spiralling economy for years, writing on such topics as multi-national companies, real estate, the development of the Chinese stock market, government reforms, state-owned enterprises, and the rapid rise of local private businesses as well as entrepreneurs. Many of their stories have already been carried by various news agencies and wire services, helping people around the world develop a better understanding of China and helping business executives formulate strategies and plans to succeed in the world's most dynamic market.
